An addition permit is required for any addition to the primary dwelling independent of size. Examples of additions would be such items as: Attached porches or decks, Converting currently unfinished space (such as attics) to new floor area, Adding new floor area to the primary dwelling, Etc. The exception to this is the remodel of currently unfinished basements to usable space, which is to be accomplished through a residential remodel permit. No addition may be constructed prior to the issuance of a building permit.
